COURT DECISIONS.

Notes of Cases Recently Decided,
Which are of Interest to Our People.

DIGESTED BY W. B. MARTIN.
(Exclusively for Virginian-Pilot.)

TEXAS & P. R. CO. V. CLAYTON.
Supreme Court of the United States.
February 20, 1899.

WHERE THE BILL OF LADING FOR GOODS PROVIDED THAT THE CARRIER ALONE IN WHOSE ACTUAL CUSTODY THEY WERE WHEN LOST SHOULD BE LIABLE, THE CARRIER WHO HAD PLACED THE GOODS ON THE WHARF OF A CONNECTING LINE AND NOTIFIED IT THEREOF, WAS LIABLE FOR THEIR DESTRUCTION BY FIRE, THE CONNECTING LINE NOT HAVING TAKEN ACTUAL CUSTODY OF THEM.

IN SUCH CASE THE CARRIER WAS NOT A WAREHOUSEMAN, BUT LIABLE AS A CARRIER.

This was an action against the defendant railroad company for damages arising from the loss of cotton by fire. The plaintiff delivered the cotton to the railroad company at Bonham, Texas, to be carried to Liverpool. The bills of lading provided that in case of loss the carrier in the actual custody of whom the goods were at that time should alone be liable. The company carried the cotton to New Orleans, the end of its line, and placed it on its wharf at Westmore, opposite to New Orleans, to be delivered to its connecting steamship company to be carried to Liverpool. On the morning of the fire and at other times previous thereto, the officers of the railway company gave verbal notice to the steamship company that the cotton was on the wharf, and asked them to remove it. The cotton was destroyed by fire and this suit was brought. The lower courts gave judgment for plaintiff and the railroad company appealed.

In the case at bar, the facts plainly indicate that although the goods had been placed by the first carrier upon the wharf, and although that was the place at which the steamship company was to receive or usually received goods from the railway company for further transportation, they were not in the actual possession or under the actual control of the connecting carrier at the time of the fire. The connecting carrier had not given a mate's receipt for the cotton or assumed control of it. True it had received notice that the goods were on the wharf and could be taken into possession, but such notice did not put the cotton into the actual custody of the connecting carrier. The opportunity given it to take possession or its mere readiness to take possession was not under the contract equivalent to placing the cotton in the actual custody of the steamship line. The undertaking of the railway company was to transport safely and deliver to the next connecting carrier. But its further express agreement was, in substance, that if any carrier incurred liability to the shipper in respect to the goods, that carrier alone was to be liable who, at the time the cotton was damaged or lost, had it in actual custody. In other words, the delivery to the connecting carrier, which would, as between the first carrier and the shipper, terminate the liability of such carrier, must have been a delivery that put the cotton into the actual, not constructive, custody of the connecting carrier. To hold otherwise is to eliminate from the contract the clause relating to actual custody. A further contention of the defendant is that at the time of the fire it held the goods, if at all, only as a warehouseman and not as a common carrier, and that the Circuit Court erred in not so instructing the jury. We cannot assent to this view. It could not convert itself into a warehouseman by proving that it had, before the fire, tendered the goods to the connecting carrier, and that the latter neglected, although without reasonable excuse, to take them into its actual custody. Affirmed.

AMER. W. WATCH CO. V. U. S. WATCH CO.
Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts.
March 2, 1899.

A COURT WILL ENJOIN A COMPANY FROM USING THE WORDS "WALTHAM," OR "WALTHAM, MASS.," ON ITS WATCHES, WHEN ANOTHER COMPANY HAD FOR A LONG TIME USED THE FORMER WORD AS A TRADE MARK, OR TRADE NAME, ON WATCHES MANUFACTURED BY IT.

This was a suit to enjoin the defendant company from advertising its watches as "Waltham Watch" or "Waltham Watches," and from marking its watches in such a way that the word "Waltham" is conspicuous. The plaintiff was the first manufacturer of watches in Waltham and had acquired a great reputation before defendant began business.

The question raised at the hearing, and now before us, is whether the defendant shall be enjoined further against using the words "Waltham," or "Waltham, Mass.," upon plates of its watches, without some accompanying statement which shall distinguish clearly its watches from those made by the plaintiff.

In cases of this sort what ultimately is to be worked out is a point or line between conflicting claims, each of which has meritorious grounds, and would be extended further were it not for the other. It is desirable that the plaintiff should not lose custom by reason of the public mistaking another manufacturer for it. It is desirable that the defendant should be free to manufacture watches at Waltham, and to tell the world that it does so. The two desiderata cannot both be had to their full extent, and we have to fix the boundaries as best we can. On the one hand, the defendant must be allowed to accomplish his desideratum in some way, whatever the loss to the plaintiff. On the other, we think, the cases show that the defendant fairly may be required to avoid deceiving the public to the plaintiff's harm, so far as is practicable in a commercial sense. Whatever might have been the doubts some years ago, we think that now it is pretty well settled that the plaintiff, merely on the strength of having been first in the field, may not later come to the trouble of taking such reasonable precautions as are commercially practicable to prevent their lawful names and advertisements from being deceptively diverting the plaintiff's custom.

We cannot go behind the finding that such a deceptiveness is the effect, and intended effect, of the marks in question. We cannot go behind the finding that it is practicable to distinguish the defendant's watches from those of the plaintiff, and that it ought to be done. The question is specific and concrete. The judge who heard the evidence has answered it, and we cannot say that he was wrong. Decree for plaintiff.

BURROUGHS MEMORIAL CHURCH.

To-morrow will be the fifth anniversary of the Rev. George W. Cox as pastor of Burroughs Memorial Baptist Church, Lambert's Point. During this period this church has grown from a mere handful to a membership of over one hundred and fifty. The pastor deems it fitting and appropriate to make public recognition of the success that has crowned his labors during his pastorate. Accordingly, appropriate exercises will be held at the church to-morrow, at which time he will preach his fifth anniversary sermon. Special music will be a feature of the occasion. All members of the church and congregation are earnestly requested to be present.

Forced methods, patent processes, fictitious favors, are all foreign to the system used by the Proprietors of the G. O. Taylor Whiskey.

Age can only come to liquor by percolation of time. No bottle of G. O. Taylor Whiskey is ever offered for sale that has not seen seven summers of great age. No individual or firm in America can furnish genuine G. O. Taylor Whiskey except in bottles bearing the firm name signature of the proprietors, Chester H. Graves & Sons, Boston, Mass. The genuineness of family druggists and grocers who have a reputation for fair and honorable dealing supply "G. O. T." when it is ordered.
